lecting the present republican candi tious political aspirant says to-day. We are not concerned with the present professions of Mr. Blaine, but in order o form a fair estimate of him, and his aims and methods we are to consider his past record-his past actionswhen selfish interest did not require him to bid or Irish votes or Catholic nfluence. And what has been Mr. Biaine's record for the past thirty year or more, since he came to Augusta, Maine, the son of a devoted atholic mother-a mother whose Christain effort ever was to lead this son to the teachings and follow the moral precepts of her faith? We find that as early as 1854 Mr. Blaine was associated with one Stevens editor of the Kennebec Journal, and hat Stevens was a prominent knownothing; and the entire influence of this paper was to sustain the most violent knownothingism. Whether Mr. Blaine belonged to such an organ zation or not is not of ecusequence. which was an organ of knownothing was printed in that paper, so far as n ould influence, was used against the rights and liberties of Catholics in this country. Mr. Blaine is the present candidate of the republican party, and very man knows, who knows any thing of politics in this country, that this knownothing party became merged in, and made up a large part of the present republican party. Every republican was not a knownothing, true, but we may be very sure of is-that as a rule, every knownothing became a republican. Do our Catholic citizens, or those of Irish blood, discover any way by which they can have the right to sustain a man of Mr. Blaine's past history, and elect him to the presidency? Legal right to vote for this man, of course, they have, but moral right it is most respectfully denied they do have for no man has the right to do wrong. No man has the moral right to aid in supporting men who have tried to destroy everything that he holds sacred and true. From 1854 down to 1875 we find that Mr. Blaine was constantly with the republican party, and that during or used his pen to defend, in any way, the Irish citizen, nor to seek to stay the wild and delusive prejudices which were used against Catholics.

When he could have said a kind Blaine-as the recent mass meeting of Irish citizens in Boston found him e tirely silent, not even condescending toreply to the note of invitation. man, however, did did speak out, and he was the same man who said in answer to inquiries of his past life, "Tell the truth!" man was Grover Cleveland, And how do we find James G.
